

Emergency Planning

Every year emergencies and disasters take their toll on local governments, communities, schools, and businesses—in lives and dollars. Emergencies and disasters often cause deaths and injuries, disrupt operations, create physical or environmental damage, while threatening the entity's public image or ability to financially recover. But something can be done! The impact of the emergency or disaster can be lessened if an emergency plan is written ahead of time. The act of writing an emergency plan serves as a catalyst for improved safety and security to reduce the risk of the disaster.
